[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]
Madison, Wis., Feb. 5.—The senate this morning quietly laid over the resolution passed by the assembly last night, under a suspension of the rules, memorializing congress to pass the La Follette bill to limit the hours of service of railroad employees.

Waits Its Turn
Senator Whitehead suggested the resolution should lie over under the rules, and President Connors agreed. No effort was made for any immediate action. Senator La Follette is not as powerful in the senate as in the assembly.

Sanborn's Bill
Senator Sanborn introduced a bill aimed at reckless hunters. It provides that the killing of a person by a hunter, negligently, shall be manslaughter in the fourth degree.

New York, Feb. 5.—After fifty years of existence the Charity Ball continues to hold an undisputed place, and from the outlook the renewal of the annual event at the Waldorf-Astoria tonight will be as great a social and financial success as any of its predecessors. The money taken will, as usual, benefit the Nursery and Child's hospital. There has been a great rush for tickets, but some have been reserved for late comers. There will be a great many representatives of the army and navy in the opening promenade, including delegations from West Point, the Brooklyn navy yard and Governor's Island. Three orchestras will furnish an unlimited opportunity for dancing.

Meyers, 10 shares each, and Albert Fulton, 8. The bank will occupy the old postoffice block and will doubtless be ready for business by June although the present occupants, J. A. Taggart and Joseph West do not give up their lease until March 1.

The program provides for a general session each morning and evening while the different departments of the association will hold their meetings in the afternoon. In some instances special commissions appointed at the Boston convention last year will contribute the results of their work. Whether amusements and sports may not be an aid to religion will be one of the leading subjects discussed. E. church in this city. During the two days it will be in session the convention will be addressed by a number of prominent speakers, among them Rev. P. A. Baker, of Columbus, O., general superintendent of the National Anti-Saloon League.

It is planned to keep up the work at least ten days and by holding fifty or more services daily it is expected to reach the most of the large factories in the metropolis. Fifteen-minute meetings are held, closing three minutes before the whistle blows where ever it is the custom to suspend work for only half an hour, while thirty-minute meetings are held in those shops where an hour is allowed for lunch. INCORPORATION OF ORGANIZED TENNIS

Subject Will Be Discussed and Voted Upon at Annual Convention of National Association.

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]
New York, Feb. 5.—The announcement that the matter of incorporating the United States National Lawn Tennis Association would be discussed and voted upon at the association's annual meeting at the Waldorf-Astoria this evening has attracted much attention among tennis players everywhere. For more than a quarter of a century the national body has been governed by the somewhat antiquated methods of an executive committee, the officers being annually elected by the delegates from the constituent organizations. Among the greater number of the followers of the sport the movement to incorporate is heralded as a step forward in the progressive scheme which was proposed for teams in America last year, and one which will materially assist in overcoming many of the obstacles that have been found fault with. It is proposed that the plan of incorporation will follow closely along the same lines as the Amateur Athletic Union.

THAW TRIAL CONTINUES TO HOLD PUBLIC ATTENTION

District Attorney Jerome Closely Questions The First Witness For The Defense Today.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]
New York, Feb. 5.—Dr. C. C. Wiley of Pittsburg, an insanity expert, who knows Harry Thaw, was the first witness for the defense at the Thaw trial today. He declared it was his belief that Thaw was suffering from insanity when he shot White. The question upon which Wiley declared Thaw insane when he killed White was stricken out because it did not conform to the state statutes. Upon its reformation in accordance with the New York law, Wiley again announced that Thaw was insane at the time he shot White. District Attorney Jerome lead the witness through a long series of questions dealing with all manner of subjects, asking him his opinion as an expert on most of these. His purpose to break up as far as possible the doctor's influence with the jury was apparent. Jerome took the witness over every incident of the night of the tragedy and asked in each case if he thought Thaw's acts were those of an insane man. The witness finally summed up the answers as follows: "Taken alone they do not impress me so, but taken together they do." Dr. Wiley said his opinion as to Thaw's mental condition had been formed from the occurrence of the night of the tragedy and other information outside of that affair. Jerome displayed the thoroughness with which he has studied medical authorities to fit himself for the Thaw case by leading the witness through a chain of questions dealing with pathology which at times seemed thoroughly to baffle the witness who hesitated time and again, and evaded direct answers. Dr. Wiley was still undergoing a cross-examination when a recess was taken. Dr. Wiley resumed the stand as soon as the afternoon session convened and Jerome continued his tactics of the morning session, putting the witness through a "rigid test" as to his medical knowledge. Jerome concluded the cross-examination of Dr. Wiley at 3:40 and Dr. C. H. Bingham, the Thaw family physician, was called.

POWERS' FOURTH TRIAL TO BE DEFERRED FORMONTHS

Called In Georgetown, Ky., Court Today, But Docket Is Crowded—Much Money For Defense.

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]
Georgetown, Ky., Feb. 5.—Knocked about like a rudderless ship on a storm-swept sea, Caleb Powers, Kentucky's most noted prisoner, was called into court today to again stand trial for alleged complicity in the assassination of Governor William Goebel seven years ago. Owing to the crowded docket the trial will probably be deferred for several months, when a special term of court will be convened to try the case. Powers has been tried twice for the crime charged against him just three times. Twice juries voted to send him to the penitentiary for life, and twice the verdict was reversed by the court of appeals. The next jury condemned him to die on the scaffold. Again the court of appeals came to his rescue and set the finding of the lower court aside, and remanded him for a new trial. Powers' friends have stood by him during the long period of his imprisonment, and were it not for the assistance they have rendered him, he would long since have been in the penitentiary and forgotten. When he was arrested he did not have a dollar and public sentiment was against him; but when the legislature appropriated $100,000 to prosecute Powers and those indicted with him, his friends went to work to raise funds to assist him. It has been said that every prominent Republican in the United States has contributed to the fund for his defense, and among them are mentioned the names of President Roosevelt, the late Senators Quay and Hanna and Secretary Taft.

E. A. BROWN WRITES FROM MIN-OT, NORTH DAKOTA.

FORMER MILTON RESIDENT

Has Eight-Hundred-Acre Farm Near
 "Chicago of the Northwest" and Is Prospering.

Minot, N. D., Jan. 30, '07.

Janesville Gazette:

Dear Sirs:—At your request I will send you a sketch of my experience in North Dakota.

Five years ago the nineteenth of next March I loaded my car at Milton, Wis., and billed it for Minot, N.

D., not knowing just where I was going to locate but determined to settle in Ward county, this state. I arrived at the end of my journey the twenty-fifth of March.

Rush of Immigrants.

There were sixty-three emigrant cars in our train, another string of about the same length just ahead of us and still another behind us. There was no chance to unload a car here

just then as there was a general

stampede of emigrants in this busy little city. You could get plenty to eat but no place to sleep. As I had never been here I began to look for a claim, that is, a homestead. I found the land office but could not get to

it. There were from two to three hundred people lined up to file on claims.

Bought "Relinquishment."

I finally went to Berthold, a small town just started, with about half a dozen houses and a population of about twenty. Here I bought a "relinquishment" paying $225. There was about three feet of snow and from four inches to six feet of water under

it. We could not get out of town with lumber and therefore waited three weeks for the water to go down

so I could build a house on my claim.

My house was the second built in Grand Prairie township, as we afterwards named the district. By the way, this town of Berthold is now a thriving little city with two railroads, and a hustling population of about four hundred, with the best farming country surrounding it that the sun ever shone upon.

Saw Minot Had Future

After living there about three years

I saw that Minot was going to be the "Chicago of the Northwest." At that time Minot had a population of about 1500 and today has a population of over 7000. While farmland was yet cheap I bought 640 acres four miles south of this city for $5,000, for which since I have refused $20 an acre. I sold my homestead at Berthold for $2000 and paid $2500 for an other quarter section joining my 640

here which now gives me 300 acres

as fine a farm as anyone could wish to own.

Much Under Cultivation

I have something like 600 acres under cultivation and expect to break

one hundred more next spring. Last year, the fall of 1906, I thrashed nine thousand bushels of wheat, oats, speltz and flax, four thousand of it being flax. My thrashing bill was nearly nine hundred dollars. Land that four, five and six years ago was homesteads, is now selling at from twenty to thirty dollars per acre. Is there a state in the union which can beat North Dakota in prosperity?

Famine Exaggerated

The eastern papers are full of the coal famine in North Dakota. Of course there is a shortage of coal

here this winter, but the eastern papers are exaggerating it terribly. The railroad companies are a great deal to blame for not supplying mine-owners with cars to deliver their coal.

Mines are close at hand here with an unlimited quantity of coal, but the people can not all get it in one day nor one week. They must learn to get their coal in the fall before the rush.

Snow and Floods

We have now about three feet of snow with good prospects of more before we have any less. Our track is from three to six feet above the ground, looking like a railroad grade.

The road is all right but when you meet a team you have troubles of your own, getting off the track and getting back on.

Yours truly,

E. A. BROWN.

WISCONSIN WEATHER FORECAST

Fair and warmer tonight; Wednesday fair except snow in western portion; warmer.

NOT ADVISING

Recently the Gazette has received several communications asking for information regarding the spring campaign and the choice for Mayor. Some of these letters were signed and some were not and it is thought best to answer them all together. The Gazette has made no choice for Mayor and will not until after the primary. Its columns are open to the views of citizens who desire to offer communications that are respectful, but abusive articles will not be used. The question has been asked relative to certain aldermen who have expressed mayoralty aspirations resigning to avoid the possibility of a special election in case they should be nominated. On this question the Gazette is not giving any advice. As far as can be learned the law makes no requirements that they resign and while perhaps it would be a prestige should they do so it is not necessary. Under the primary law the will of the people is supposed to be asserted at the polls and if citizens are interested in the selection of good men for the office of Mayor and city officers they should go out and vote for them. It is safe to say that the nominees will be the men chosen by the majority of the people so the results rest with the voters themselves.

THE SMALL BOY

It is whispered about the state capital that Speaker Ekern has fallen down in his first real attempt at governing the lower house of the state legislature. The question of rules is one which has been customary for many years to be adopted by both the senate and assembly after joint consideration. Ekern was a member of the assembly committee and asked for certain rulings when they were placed in the list. When the Senate adopted the rules as prepared the Assembly revolted and led by some of the radicals and supported by the man who framed them they were thrown out. The idea has gone broadcast that the Senate tried to bluff the Assembly and was called when the real facts are the speaker who framed them did not have backbone enough to stand by them when they were presented for consideration. It was the small boy trick.

WISCONSIN'S POPULATION

In the last issue of the Century Magazine appears an article by Warden Curtis of Madison, relative to the diversified population of Wisconsin. The characteristics of the different races in the state's limits, the colonies of different nationalities and their mode of enjoying life. It is a most interesting resume of bits of state history that are not generally known and well worth reading and considering.

COUNTRY PROSPEROUS

Rock county is prosperous this year. Take every city and village within its limits and new buildings are being planned, new corporations being formed and a general tone of prosperity is exhibited. Edgerton, Evansville, Milton, Milton Junction, Beloit and other communities are in a better financial condition than ever before.

GOOD ROADS

The state could well afford to look into the question of good country roads. The population is sufficiently dense in many localities to assure the success of such a plan should it be tried. Take the roads of Rock county for instance and see how they could be improved with but little work and a small expense.

GROWS IN OFFICE

Assistant Postmaster Madden has grown since he took his office several years ago. He now seeks to have legislation enacted that will be injurious to the country newspapers and publishers generally. It is time that the people assert themselves and urge their congressmen to examine the report of the Postal Commission before voting for its passage.

Hot Springs, Arkansas, will soon be as clean and sweet a city as reform can make it. No gambling, no racing. Waugh, what a howl they will make as soon as the two elements make up the whole city. Except for the visitors.

In a letter from a former Milton resident, to the Gazette, the fact is stated that the railroads are not so much to blame for the coal famine in North Dakota as are the people who did not lay in their supply of winter fuel months ago.

Alderman Fish has been misun-stood. He does not speak to increase the indebtedness of the citizens, but to facilitate the growth. His idea of renumbering the houses is a good one and it is too bad he has been misunderstood.

Arkansas has now driven out the packers. Not content with the exodus of the farm machinery men they now go for the men who sell the beef.

Cleaning snow from sidewalks is a necessity, not a pleasure. Still some do not even see the necessity.

There is still much time before the new bills are all in for freak legislation to appear at Madison.

The council still has many questions to consider besides that five dollars a meeting one.

SWALLOW'S FLIGHT IS RAPID.

Speed of 128 Miles An Hour Determined in an Experiment.

The French scientific weekly, Ciel et Terre, prints an interesting article about the speed of several birds, as observed by August Vershaurin of Antwerp. The rapidity of flight credited to the swallow (290 feet a second) seemed exaggerated to him and he undertook some experiments on his own hook.

He sent several baskets of pigeons to Compiegne, France, and in a separate cage a swallow which had its nest under the gable roof of the railroad station at Antwerp. On November 7, at 7:30 in the morning, all the birds were liberated at Compiegne; the swallow took a northern direction as quick as lightning, while the pigeons made several spirals in the air before they started in the same direction. The swallow arrived at its nest in Antwerp at 8:23, a number of witnesses being present at its arrival.

The first pigeons only arrived at their destination at 11:30 of the same morning. The swallow had, therefore, covered the entire distance of 146½ miles in one hour and 18 minutes, which is equal to a speed of 128½ miles an hour, or about 180 feet a second, which is about double the speed of an express train.

The pigeons only reached a speed of 35 miles an hour, or 45 feet a second. It may be gathered from these figures how rapidly the migrations of the swallows take place, as with the speed given above it would require only half a day to fly from Belgium or Central Germany to northern Africa.

TRICKS OF PARIS BEGGARS.

All Stock Tales of the Trade Well Known to Fraternity.

This city is the happy hunting ground of the beggar, and especially at the New Year. He stops you at every corner of the street; he tries to hand you out of your carriage, the moment you stop before shop or restaurant. It is partly the influence of the season, but it is an evil that is always with us more or less. Some have quite ingenious tricks to tempt the pity of the passerby.

One lady, who is well known, declares every evening at the Gare St. Lazare to any sympathetic looking stranger that she is a governess, and has lost her purse, and would the kind gentleman lend her 30 centimes. "And be pleased to give me your card," she adds, "so that I may return the money." The ruse generally succeeds, but the mendicant has never been known to take the omnibus, except at the close of a profitable evening, when she has probably victimized a dozen good natured persons. Another woman who plies her singular industry in the Place de la Concorde, addresses herself exclusively to her own sex. As a result, she obtains as much as five or ten francs from kindly matrons who are touched by her story.

At the New Year the usual crop of beggars is so immensely increased that one supposes that the comparatively well off must descend into the street to try their luck. No doubt it is a "metier" that has its fascinations, especially if it be but temporary. —Paris Correspondence Pall Mall Gazette.

Literary Fame.

"Zangwill," said a magazine editor, "entered literature by the back stairs. Instead of submitting his first story to the magazine he had it printed in pamphlet form, and sold it on the news stands at a cent a copy. He made out of it $150. Now had this story been submitted to me I should undoubtedly have rejected it."

"Zangwill has turned to plays because he doesn't think there is much in books. Once I heard him say bitterly: "If you are blessed with talent, great industry and conceit it is possible, by dint of slaving day and night, for years, during the flower of your youth, to attain to fame infinitely less widespread than a prize fighter's."

With a Real Octopus.

Here is an octopus adventure. The crew of the Perle, a fishing boat hailing from Cancale, France, between St. Malo and Mont St. Michael, were about to pull in a big net, when they encountered a sudden resistance. The net was simply crumpled, not, however, with good mackerel, but with vast number of octopi, each provided with tentacles more than six feet in length. The slimy wretches swarmed up one side of the craft, giving the fishers a frightful experience. The men had at last to cut the rope of the net, sacrificing it altogether, and then to free the side of the boat from the octopi which stuck to it.

All Weigh Alike.

A barrel of beef, a barrel of pork and a barrel of fish each weighs 200 pounds.

MAYOR UPHOLDS CITY ATTORNEY

IN MESSAGE EXPLAINING THE ALDERMANIC-SALARY VETO.

ADVOCATES RETURN OF FEES

Already Paid to the City Fathers—Matter Will Presently Be Tested in the Courts.

Last evening Mayor Hutchinson returned unsigned to the city council the orders for the compensation of the junior aldermen passed at the previous session, accompanied by a message setting forth his reasons for so doing and urging the gentlemen concerned to return their back pay if the city attorney shall find that they are liable to the city for the same.

The matter was taken up for discussion at the two-hour star-chamber session, but no action was taken in open meeting. It is understood, however, that the parties affected have retained Attorney T. S. Nolan to carry the matter into the courts for a test. The mayor's communication follows:

Members of the Common Council: Gentlemen—The people of the city of Janesville have indicated their confidence in my honesty and integrity, by electing me for the second time mayor of their city.

At the time I assumed charge of this office I took a solemn oath to perform the duties according to my best judgment. One of which is to sign all orders on the city treasurer for the payment of money, thereby making me the guardian of all moneys collected by the city from the taxpayers, for the purpose of defraying the legal costs and expenses of its administration. It is also my duty to prevent, so far as lies within my power, the illegal expenditures of the money of the taxpayers of this city. To this, gentlemen, is a sacred trust that has been imposed upon me by the people.

You, gentlemen, are selected by the voters of your respective wards and sent here for the purpose of conducting the administration of this city. You, also, took a solemn oath, that you would perform the duties of your office to the best of your judgment. And in order that we may not be misled as to the law applicable to all our acts, while performing the duties of our respective offices, the people of this city have provided for us a lawyer, in whom they have indicated their confidence in his ability as a lawyer, by electing him to the office of city attorney. He also took a solemn oath that he would perform the duties of his office according to the best of his judgment. It is his duty to conduct the legal business of the city, protect all of the legal rights of its citizens, as represented by the city in its municipal capacity, to advise the members of the council at all times as to the law applicable to their acts as representatives of the city. He is at no time, gentlemen, your attorney, in the sense of an attorney and client. And the moment your interests are in conflict with that of the city's he is the attorney against you, as he cannot be the attorney for two parties to the same controversy whose interests are in conflict. You are not at liberty to disregard the opinion of the attorney, chosen for your legal advisor by the voters of the municipality you represent, while representing their interests, whether his opinion is in conflict to your private interests or not to your liking. He is sent here by the people of this city to interpret the law for the government of your city and to protect them against the illegal expenditure of the money of its taxpayers, as much as lies within his power. You, gentlemen, represent the city as aldermen, and not as city attorneys.

At the last regular meeting of this council, you passed an order by a unanimous vote of all the aldermen present, by which you allowed Alderman Watt $10, Alderman Buchholz $10, Alderman Merritt $10, Alderman Sheridan $10, and Alderman Rudolph $5, to pay them for their time spent at regular meetings of this council during the month of January, which the clerk of this city has presented to me for my signature. Notwithstanding, the attorney of this city, the one employed by the people whose money you are seeking to appropriate, has filed an opinion in writing, in which he holds that you cannot legally do so. I believe, gentlemen, that he has stated the law correctly. I therefore return you the orders without my signature, as I have at all times refused to sign any order, if at the time I had any knowledge of its illegality. I consider it my duty, in view of the opinion of our city attorney, to at this time advise the council, that all aldermen who have heretofore received any money voted to them by this council in payment for their attendance at a regular meeting, if they fail to return to the city treasurer the respective amounts within a reasonable time, that you direct the city attorney to investigate the law, and if the city is entitled to recover the several amounts illegally paid, that he institute proceedings for its recovery. However, if it is to be presumed in view of the oaths taken by you at the time you assumed the duties of your office, that you will gladly, and cheerfully, return this money to the tax payers of the city.

Interesting Portrayal of Shakespeare's Comedy, Was Witnessed by Good-Sized Audience.

Before a good-sized audience, considering the unfavorable weather, Miss Florence Gale, and her company gave a very fair interpretation of Shakespeare's "Taming of the Shrew" at the Myers theatre last evening. The curtain raiser, "Nance, Oldfield," was also pleasing. Darrell Vinton had the part of "Petrichio" in the Shakespearean comedy and Miss Gale that of "Katherine."

WAS TOO EAGER TO CONFESS.

Case Where Investigation Should Have Preceded Explanation.

A story is being told of a pickpocket who, when accused of theft, was touched on hearing that the watch purloined had belonged to his victim's mother, and caused it to be restored. If we were all arrested when appearances are against us many would risk being charged with pocketpicking, says the London Standard. Lord Russell of Killowen certainly would not have escaped—did not, in fact. As a young man he went to a theater, where he was wedged in the crowded pit, to hear a cry raised, "My watch is gone!" The man who complained declared that the thief was Russell or one or two men between whom he was standing. Russell suggested that they should go to the box office and be searched. As he led the way it occurred to him that if the man behind were guilty he would try to thrust the watch into his (Russell's) pocket, so he drew the tails of his coat tightly around him. To his horror he felt that the watch was already there! Luckily, as they approached the box office a detective recognized the man behind Russell as an old thief, and took him into custody. The other two received apologies and were permitted to depart. But the watch burned in Russell's pocket. He could not let an innocent man suffer. He walked slowly back to the office and confessed that, although he was not the thief, he really had the watch. He put his hand into his pocket to produce the hateful thing, and drew out—a forgotten snuff box.

WHEN DUTTON CAME BACK.

Explanations Were Neither Offered Nor Seemingly Wanted.

It is said that 50 years ago a man named Dutton lived on the present Squire Smith place, near the bridge crossing Sugar creek, on the road to Bean lake. One morning Mrs. Dutton had bread to bake and sent Dutton out after an armful of oven wood, as they call it over there—heavy wood to produce a lasting fire. Dutton was something of a slow poke, and as he went out his wife, who was something of a shrew, said to him: "Now, don't be gone five years."

The husband did not return with the wood, and his disappearance caused a big sensation. Some said he had been foully dealt with, others said that he had eloped with a woman. But exactly five years later he walked into the house with an armful of oven wood, which he threw into the wood box of the kitchen stove. His wife displayed no astonishment, whatever her feelings might have been. "Now," she said, "carry the slop out to the pigs."

Dutton carried the slop out to the pigs, as directed, and resumed his old place in the household without comment or explanation.—Atchison Globe.

Business Women of a Maine Town.

If Norway ever should have a mayor the chances are ten to one a woman would hold the office. This Oxford county village of 1,500 inhabitants has more than a score of women managing progressive lines of business. The town physician is a woman. A woman is justice of the peace. A woman manages a dry goods store. Another is photographer, a fifth is bank cashier, a sixth is an undertaker, and still a seventh is an insurance agent. Until her recent resignation, Rev. Caroline H. Angell was, for 13 years, pastor of the Universalist Church of Norway. Mrs. F. W. Sanborn is responsible for the appearance of the Norway Advertiser, the local weekly. This by no means completes the list of the successful business women of Norway.—Lewiston Journal.

First Born Children Are Ablest.

According to some curious investigations conducted by English scientists, eldest sons tend to be criminals and youngest sons paupers. A great many thousand school children and many family histories have been examined to yield these results: "First born children were found to be, as a rule, taller and heavier, with greater ability and endurance than the others." This is in accordance with the popular feeling in many countries that the oldest child is superior to the others and deserving of special privileges. It is a well-established fact that among men of genius an undue proportion are eldest sons.

The Human Moulting.

"Mankind moults like the horse or cat," said a hairdresser. "Don't be alarmed, sir. You have still a fair crop. However, if you insist, I shan't stand in my own way. Yes, thank you—$2 for the half pint size."

"You are moulting now." How can I tell? I can tell by the fact that it is only the long hairs that are falling out. You, like every other mortal, moults twice a year.

"The male moults, on account of the hair's shortness—is less perceptible than the female. Young ladies come to me in agony. Their hair is falling like the leaves in October. I calm their fears."

"Cheer up, I say. You are only moulting."

His Standing.

"That old fellow," said the summer boarder, "looks as if he might be your oldest inhabitant."

"Who, Uncle Silas? No," replied the native. "Why, he ain't skercely no more than our middle-aged inhabitant."

Too Many Interested.

"I never get weighed in public places any more," said a thin woman in New York. "The ceremony draws too big a crowd. Just as sure as a person begins to 'dally' around a weighing machine, she becomes a magnet for all the idlers in the neighborhood. They cease their chatter and their aimless staring and crowd around to read the figures. Then they keep up a fire of comments: 'Gee,' says one, 'I didn't think she'd go that high.' 'I thought,' says another, 'that she'd weigh a little more than that.' For the person who strikes a happy medium these criticisms are perhaps not unwelcome, but for the one who overshoots or undershoots the mark the ordeal is not pleasant."

Truth.

Paste this in your hat: To thine own self be false, and it must follow, as the night the day, thou canst not then be true to any man.

Heat as Healing Power.

Observing in the tropics how the intense heat of the sun accelerated the healing of wounds and burns, a French physician, Dr. Asbeck, used the heat of ordinary fire in 500 cases of burns and wounds, after putting on the usual dressing, and with uniform success.

WIFE DESERTER IS

Martin Dohs, Who Sent Family Away on Visit and Sold Out Their Home Last Summer, Behind the Bars.

On July 12th last Mrs. Martin Dohs and her three little children returned from a visit in Watertown to discover that their husband and father had sold all the household goods to junk men and quietly departed for regions unknown. The family had gone away to visit at the urgent request of Dohs, who pretended that their happiness was his whole concern. His real purpose was only too obvious when they came back to find that their home had been wiped out of existence. The police did not forget this man, though he has doubtless long believed himself to be safe and secure from prosecution. Last night Sheriff J. U. Fisher swooped down on him in Rockford, where he is alleged to have been living with another woman and brought him back to this city. In municipal court this morning he was placed under $800 bonds pending his examination on Wednesday morning.

MUCH INTEREST IN CHARITABLE WORKS

Regular Meeting of the Associated Charities Was Held Monday.

At the regular meeting of the Associated Charities was held yesterday afternoon at Helmsstreet's drugstore, notwithstanding the bitter cold day. There was a full attendance. The reports of the several ward committees showed that six families had been helped to wood, coal and groceries. Clothing, etc., was issued to some ten persons. Quite a number of donations were received, and twenty-five dollars in cash. They can use all kinds of clothing, but children's underwear, women's heavy skirts, and bedding are mostly needed. Never in the history of this society has so much interest been taken and, they need so well looked after, as they have been this winter, and a great deal of praise is due the young ladies who are not only giving, but making personal efforts to visit all cases and find out the needy ones.

CITY QUITE FREE FROM CONTAGION

Last Known Case Was Released from Quarantine on Jan. 15—Low Cost of Health Department.

Since the last diphtheria case was released from quarantine on Jan. 15, the city of Janesville has been absolutely free from contagious disease, according to Health Commissioner Merritt. The municipality should consider itself particularly fortunate in view of the epidemics raging in neighboring cities. The maintenance of the health department in Chicago costs 8 cents per capita; in Madison, $5,000 a year; in New York City, 25 cents per capita; in Pittsburgh, $1.05 per capita. In Janesville it is about 3 cents per capita—the lowest known average for any city of the size in the northwest.

Mr. Morse visited the town of Wild Rose, near by, and visited some of the big potato warehouses there. The farmers have been getting 25 cents a bushel for their crop and a cashier from one of the banks told him that he had just made out a $25,000 check to pay for some of the yield. At Antigo, the Janesville man met a Mr. Salzman, who used to live in this city about a decade ago and who, at the age of 51 years, is still active and hearty and following his vocation as a traveling man. The snow in that vicinity is 2 feet deep and the sleighing which began on Nov. 1 is expected to last two months longer.

His left knee and head received the force of the fall and friends who sprang to his assistance feared that he had fractured several bones. The Value of a Sinking Fund

A sinking fund is a money set aside for payment of debts that mature in the future. Many cities have one. Every man should. You may be free from debt but a rainy day comes to all of us.

JAY COOKE, the great financier of war times, said: "What in the progress of time may intervene to help or hinder human plans is beyond the ken of any man."

There is no better way to invest your sinking fund than to own one of our certificates of deposit. They draw interest from the day the certificate is issued and are payable on demand. They can be easily cashed or transferred by your endorsement wherever you may be, and draw interest at 3 per cent if left four months and 3 per cent if left six months.

SKIN DISEASE BACILLI KILLED BY WINTERGREEN

Liquid Penetrates to the Roots of Distressing Ailments and Gives Quick Cure.

Oil of wintergreen—that simple liquid so well known to every druggist in the land—is just coming to be properly appreciated. Its value long has been known to the medical profession, but only in recent years has it been found that in a proper mixture, combined with other soothing agents, acts instantly in all cases of skin diseases, stopping immediately that awful itch.

Since skin diseases have been classified by the medical profession with germ diseases the skill of the doctor has been bent to getting to the roots of the disease. It has been found that oil of wintergreen, properly prepared with other, necessary ingredients, while itself not affecting in the least the delicate texture of the healthy skin, gets to the base of it, attacks the germs lodged there and destroys them.

One of the doctors to whom great credit is due in developing this discovery is Dr. Decatur D. Dennis, who, by combining oil of wintergreen in proper proportions with several other remedial agents, devised a refreshing wash that did away with greasy ointments and old-fashioned stomach remedies. The medical men were prevailed upon to give the general public the benefit of this lotion in the shape of "D. D. Prescription," now put up by a Chicago house, the company, which makes the famous D. D. D. skin soap.

A few drops stop that awful itch, and continued use means a quick cure for eczema, psoriasis, salt rheum, ringworm, dandruff and all other distressing diseases of the skin. Get a bottle of D. D. D. Prescription today, and stop that itch AT ONCE.

Before further progress could be made a deadly wave of poisonous fumes enveloped the rescuing party, which was composed of General Manager Ott, D. M. HEYBURN TELLS OF LAND GRABS

ACCUSES A VICE PRESIDENT OF FORESTRY BODY.

HE PROTESTS FOR IDAHO

Senator Concludes His Criticism of Administration of Public Land Laws—House Has Busy Day.

Washington, Feb. 5.—Continuing his speech Monday in the senate in criticism of the administration of the public land laws, Senator Heyburn said there was no likelihood that congress would loan the forestry bureau $5,000,000, as asked by the president, and no necessity for it.

He said the last report of the bureau showed $273,000 to the credit of this bureau, and yet the proposition is to pawn the forests of the government to the government for $5,000,000. These gentlemen seem to treat these forests as their own private enterprises.

Mr. Heyburn said the government had gone into his home county in Idaho and taken 80 per cent of the county as a forest reserve. The county had previously made public improvements, but these had all been lost to the county and acquired by the government.

Reserve System Vicious.

Senator Dewey asked if the senator's contention would destroy the whole system of forest reserves.

"The system of forest reserves as now operated," responded Mr. Heyburn, "is so vicious that anything that would destroy it would be welcome."

Mr. Dewey asked if it was not true that combinations of eastern capital had gone into the west and grabbed up large timber holdings.

"The largest land grabber is one of the vice presidents of the National Forest Reserve association of the United States," answered Mr. Heyburn. "He owns more land, the title to which was illegally obtained, than any other man or all other men in the United States, and he is one of the vice presidents of the forestry association, the president of which is, our worthy secretary of agriculture."

"I read in the paper yesterday that this vice president of the forestry association is going to build in the neighboring county to which I live, the largest mill in the world for the purpose of working up these vast areas of timber that have been wrongfully obtained in the state of Idaho."

Land Hurriedly Grabbed.

"Were not these lands acquired by the vice president spoken of before the reserves were created?" asked Mr. Smoot.

"No," a number of them were acquired while we sat here in the vain supposition that we were heading off these land grabs, while another branch of the government contracts were being rushed through with all speed that the ink might be dry on them before we passed the act which shut out the exchange of lands," answered Mr. Heyburn.

House Passes Several Bills.

The house passed a number of important bills Monday, including the McCumber service pension bill, the omnibus lighthouse bill and the omnibus revenue cutter bill. Members sought to get through with as much legislation as possible under suspension of the rules.

CHAPTER IX.

The Girl and the Rabbit.

Wind and rain raged in the wood, and occasionally both fell upon the library windows with a howl and a splash. The tempest had wakened me. It seemed that every chimney in the house held a screaming demon. We were now well launched upon December, and I was growing used to my surroundings. I had offered myself frequently as a target by land and water; I had sat on the wall and tempted fate; and I had roamed the house constantly expecting to surprise Bates in some act of treachery; but the days were passing monotonously. Twice I had seen the red-tam-o-shanter far through the wood, and once I had passed my young acquaintance with another girl, a dark, laughing youngster, walking in the highway, and she had bowed to me indifferently. Even the ghost in the wall proved inconstant, but I had twice heard the steps without being able to account for them. Memory kept plucking my sleeve with reminders of my grandfather. I was touched at finding constantly his marginal notes in the books he had collected with so much intelligence and loving care. It occurred to me that some memorial, a tablet attached to the outer wall, or perhaps, more properly placed in the chapel, would be fitting; and I experimented with designs for it, covering many sheets of drawing paper in an effort to set forth in a few words some hint of his character. On this gray morning I produced this:

1835
The life of John Marshall Glenarm was a testimony to the virtue of generosity, forbearance and gentleness. The beautiful things he loved were not nobler than his own days. His grandson (who served him ill) writes this of him 1901

I had sketched these words on a piece of cardboard and was studying them critically when Bates came in with wood.

"They're unmistakable snowflakes, sir," he remarked from the window. "We're in for winter now."

"It was undeniably snow; great, lazy flakes of it were crowding down upon the wood."

Bates had not mentioned Morgan or referred even remotely to the pistol shot of my first night, and he had certainly conducted himself as a model servant. The gardener at St. Agatha's, a Scotchman named Ferguson, had visited him several times, and I had surprised them once innocently enjoying their pipes and whisky and water in the kitchen.

"They are having trouble at the school, sir," observed Bates.

"The young ladies running a little wild, eh?"

"Sister Theresa's ill, sir. Ferguson told me last night. And Ferguson says that Miss Devereux's devotion to her aunt is quite touching."

I stood up straight and stared at Bates back—he was trying to stop the rattle which the wind had set up in one of the windows.

"Miss Devereux!"

"That's the name, sir—rather odd, I should call it."

"Yes, it is rather odd," I said, composed again, but not referring to the name. My mind was busy with a certain paragraph in my grandfather's will.

"Should he fall at any time during said year, to comply with this provision, said property shall at once revert to my general estate, and become, without reservation, and without necessity for any process of law, the property, absolutely, of Marian Devereux, of the county and state of New York."

"Your grandfather was very fond of her, sir. She and Sister Theresa were abroad at the time he died. It was my sorrowful duty to tell them the sad news in New York, sir, when they landed."

"The devil it was!" It irritated me to remember that Bates knew exactly the nature of my grandfather's will. Sister Theresa and her niece were doubtless calmly awaiting my failure to remain at Glenarm House during the disciplinary year.

I had given little thought to Sister Theresa since coming to Glenarm. She had derived her knowledge of me from my grandfather, and, such being the case, she would naturally look upon me as a blackguard and a menace to the peace of the neighborhood. I had therefore kept rigidly to my own side of the stone wall.

"Bates!"

He was moving toward the door with his characteristic slow step.

"If your friend Morgan, or any one else, should shoot me, or if I should tumble into the lake, or otherwise end my earthly career—Bates!"

His eyes had slipped from mine to the window and I spoke his name sharply.

"Yes, Mr. Glenarm."

"Then Sister Theresa's niece would get this property and everything else that belonged to Mr. Glenarm."

"That's my understanding of the matter, sir."

"Morgan, the caretaker, has tried to kill me twice since I came here. He fired at me through the window the night I came—Bates!"

I waited for his eyes to meet mine again. His hands opened and shut several times and alarm and fear convulsed his face.

"Bates, I'm trying my best to think well of you, but I want you to understand,—"I smote the table with my clenched hand,"—"that if these women,

I Smote the Table With My Clenched Hand.

or your employer, Mr. Pickering, or that damned hound Morgan, or you—damn you, I don't know who or what you are!—think you can scare me away from here, you've waked up the wrong man; and I'll tell you another thing, and you may repeat it to your school teachers, and to Mr. Pickering, who pays you, and to Morgan, whom somebody has hired to kill me,—that I'm going to keep faith with my dead grandfather, and that when I've spent my year here and done what that old man wished me to do, I'll give them this house, and every acre of ground and every damned dollar the estate carries with it. And now one other thing! I suppose there's a sheriff or some kind of a constable with jurisdiction over this place, and I could have the whole lot of you put into jail for conspiracy, but I'm going to stand out against you alone,—do you understand me, you hypocrite, you stupid, slinking spy? Answer me, quick, before I throw you out of the room!"

I had worked myself into a great passion and fairly roared my challenge, pounding the table in my rage.

"Yes, sir, I quite understand you, sir. But I'm afraid, sir."

"Of course you're afraid!" I shouted, enraged anew by his halting speech. "You have every reason in the world to be afraid. You've probably heard that I'm a bad lot and a worthless adventurer, but you can tell Sister Theresa or Pickering or anybody you please that I'm ten times as bad as I've ever been painted. Now clear out of here!"

I knocked about the library all morning without easing my spirit, and after luncheon I went off for a tramp. Winter had, indeed, come, and possessed the earth, and it had given me a new landscape. The snow continued to fall in great, heavy flakes, and the ground was whitening fast.

A rabbit's track caught my eye, and I followed it, hardly conscious that I did so. Then the clear print of two small shoes mingled with the rabbit's trail. A few moments later I picked up an overshoe, probably lost in the chase, by one of Sister Theresa's girls. I reflected: I remembered that while at Tech I had collected a diversity of memorabilia from school girl acquaintances, and here I was beginning a new series with a string of beads and an overshoe!

A rabbit is always an attractive quarry. Few things besides riches are so elusive, and the little fellows have, I am sure, a shrewd humor peculiar to themselves. I rather envied the school girl who had ventured forth for a walk in the first snow storm of the season, and recalled Aldrich's turn on Gautier's lines as I followed the double trail.

"However you tread, a tiny mould betrays that light foot all the same. Upon this glistening, snowy field at every step it signs your name."

A pretty autograph, indeed! The snow fell steadily and I tramped on over the joint signature of the girl and the rabbit. Near the lake they parted company, the rabbit leading off at a tangent, on a line parallel with the lake, while his pursuer's steps pointed toward the boat house.

There was, so far as I knew, only one student of adventurous blood at St. Agatha's, and I was not in the least surprised to see, on the little sheltered balcony of the boat house, the red tam-o-shanter. She wore, too, the covert coat I remembered from the day I saw her first from the wall. Her back was toward me as I drew near; her hands were thrust into her pockets. She was evidently enjoying the soft mingling of the snow with the still, blue waters of the lake; and a girl and a snow storm are, if you ask my opinion, a pretty combination. The fact of a girl's facing a winter storm argues mightily in her favor,—testifies, if you will allow me, to a serene and dauntless spirit for one thing, and a sound constitution for another.

I ran up the steps, my cap in one hand, her overshoe in the other. She drew back a trifle, just enough to bring my conscience to its knees.

"I didn't mean to listen that day. I just happened to be on the wall, and it was a thoroughly underbred trick—my twitting you about it—and I should have told you before if I'd known how to see you."

"May I trouble you for that shoe?" she said with tremendous dignity.

They taught that cold disdain of men, I suppose, as a required study at St. Agatha's.

"Oh, certainly! Won't you allow me?"

"Thank you, no!" She took the damp bit of rubber—a wet overshoe, even if small and halloved by associations, isn't pretty—as Venus might have received a soft-shell crab from the hand of a fresh young merman. I was between her and the steps to which her eyes turned longingly.

"Of course, if you won't accept my apology I can't do anything about it; but I hope you understand that I'm sincere and humble, and anxious to be forgiven."

"You seem to be making a good deal of a small matter—"

"I wasn't referring to the overshoe!" I said.

She did not relent.

"If you'll only go away—"

She rested one hand against the corner of the boat house, while she affixed the overshoe to her foot. She wore, I noticed, brown gloves with cuffs.

"How can I go away! You children are always leaving things about for me to pick up. I'm perfectly worn out carrying some girl's beads about with me; and I spoiled a good glove on your overshoe."

"I'll relieve you of the beads, if you please."

She thrust her hands into the pockets of her coat and shook the tam-o-shanter slightly, to establish it in a more comfortable spot on her head. The beads had been in my corduroy coat since I found them. I drew them out and gave them to her.

"Thank you, thank you very much."

"Of course they are yours, Miss—"

She thrust them into her pocket.

"Of course they're mine," she said indignantly, and turned to go.

"Well, waive proof of property and that sort of thing. I'm sorry not to establish a more neighborly feeling with St. Agatha's. The stone wall may seem formidable, but it's not of my building. I must open the gate. That wall's a trifle steep for climbing."

I was amusing myself with the idea that my identity was a dark mystery to her. I had read English novels in which the young lord of the manor is always mistaken for the game-keeper's son by the pretty daughter of the curate who has come home from school to be the belle of the county. But my lady of the red tam-o-shanter was not a creature of illusions.

"It serves a very good purpose—the wall, I mean—Mr. Glenarm."

She was walking down the steps and I followed, pleased to hear my name from her lips. I am not a man to suffer for a lost school girl to cross my lands unattended in a snow storm; and the piazza of a boat house is not, I submit, a pleasant landing place on a winter day.

She marched before me, her hands in her pockets—I liked her particularly that way—with an easy swing and a light and certain step. Her remark about the wall did not encourage further conversation, and I fell back upon the poets.

"Stone walls do not a prison make. Nor iron bars a cage," I quoted.

"I have heard that—before!" she said, half turned her face and laughed as she hastened on.

Her brilliant cheeks were a delight to the eye. The snow swirled about her, whitening the crown of her red cap and clinging to her shoulders. Have you ever seen snow crystals gleam, break, dissolve in air, soft storm-blown? Do you know how a man will pledge his soul that a particular flake will never fade, never cease to rest upon a certain flying strand over a girl's temple? And he loses—his heart and waver—in a breath! If you fall to understand these things, and are furthermore unfamiliar with the fact that the color in the cheeks of a girl who walks abroad in a driving snow storm marks the favor of heaven itself, then I waste time; and you will do well to rap at the door of another inn.

"I'd rather missed you," I said; "and really, I should have been over to apologize if I hadn't been afraid."

"Sister Theresa is rather fierce," she declared. "And we're not allowed to receive gentlemen callers—it says so in the catalogue."

"So I imagined. I trust Sister Theresa is improving."

"Yes, thank you."

"And Miss Devereux—she is quite well, I hope."

She turned her head my way as though to listen more carefully, and her step slackened for a moment; then she hurried blithely forward.

"Oh, she's always well, I believe."

"You know her, of course."

"Rather! She teaches music."

"So Miss Devereux is the music teacher, is she? Should you call her a popular teacher?"

"The girls call her"—she seemed moved to mirth by the recollection—"Miss Prim and Prissy."

"Ugh!" I exclaimed sympathetically. "Tall and hungry looking, with long talons that pound the keys with grim delight. I know the sort."

"She's a sight!"—and my guide laughed approvingly. "But we have to take her, she's part of the treatment."

"You speak of St. Agatha's as though it were a sanatorium."

"Oh, it's not so bad; there are worse."

We approached the gate. Her indifference to the storm delighted me. Here, I thought in my admiration, is a real product of the Western world. I felt that we had made strides toward such a comradeship as it is proper should exist between a school girl in her teens and a male neighbor of 27. I was going back to English fiction—the young squire walking home with the curate's pretty young daughter and conversing with fine condescension.

RUSH ANTI-POOL SELLING BILL.

Arkansas Legislators Hope to Apply It to Oaklawn Meeting.

Little Rock, Ark., Feb. 5.—The Amis anti-pool selling bill, prohibiting betting on horse races, passed the senate Monday afternoon by a vote of 27 to 2. An amendment, which sought to restrict the provisions of the bill from applying to organized race track enclosures was killed. Sentiment in the house indicates that the bill will pass that body without material opposition and it will be hurried so that it may apply to the 60-day meeting which was begun at Oaklawn track in Hot Springs Monday afternoon.

Provisions of the Amis bill not only place severe fines and imprisonment for betting on horse races within the state, but provide for forfeitures of office by any county or municipal officer who evades its enforcement.

NEGRO TELLS ABOUT SHOOTING AFFAIR

SENATE COMMITTEE HEARS DISCHARGED SOLDIER.

D COMPANY IS DEFENDED

Former Sergeant Harris Asserts Its Members Were Not Guilty of the Outrage at Brownsville.

Washington, Feb. 5.—The investigation by the senate committee on military affairs of the Brownsville (Tex.) affair, was begun Monday. A score of negro soldiers of the Twenty-fifth infantry, discharged from the army without honor because of their alleged participation in the shooting up of the Texas town, were in attendance when the committee began its first sitting. They were not invited into the committee room as a whole, but were assigned to an unused end of a corridor near the room and only a limited number were permitted to sit in the room during the proceedings.

Tells of Happenings.

Most of these men were privates, but in addition there was former Sergeant Israel Harris, of D company, who is now employed in Boston. Senator Foraker took charge of the calling of witnesses and first summoned Harris to the stand. He was questioned by Senator Foraker and said he is now employed as porter in the Elliott National bank in Boston. He explained the position he had held in company D, and was then interrogated concerning the happenings at Fort Brown on the night of August 13-14.

In reply to questions he said: "On the night we had some disturbance. Some shooting, I mean. I was asleep in D barracks, and at about 12 o'clock I was aroused by the noise of guns. I put on my trousers and shoes. But no blouse or leggings. Then there was the sound of arms, and D company got dressed and we started for our guns."

The witness then told of getting the guns in the dark, after the racks had been opened. He described the racks and showed that there is but one key to a rack, and this key will unlock only one rack, and that the keys are in the possession of non-commissioned officers.

All Present at Big Call.

The witness said that when the company formed outside, Capt. Lons of D company was present and immediately called the roll and personally counted his men and that none were absent. He said that no person had joined the company after the formation and he declared that no man could have fired from D barracks without having been detected. He told of the patrol of the town by D company and the fact that no soldiers were found in the town and finally he told of the return from the patrol and the surrender of arms and the locking of the arms in the racks. The inspection of guns on the following morning was explained. It was found, he said, that none of the guns had been used, or if they had been, they had been cleaned over night.

Transport line across Isthmus of Tehuantepec is now open for the world's traffic

Map showing location of Tehuantepec Route.

By the completion of the Tehuantepec National railway, which crosses the isthmus of that name, an important new commercial route from Atlantic seaboard cities to ports on the Pacific is established. At the same time a competitor to the Panama route is to be reckoned with.

The American-Hawaiian Steamship company has concluded a contract with the railway, by reason of which hereafter the dangerous and lengthy voyage around Cape Horn will be avoided. The company's fleet of 12 large steamships will be divided, one squadron operating in the Pacific, between Salina Cruz, the southern terminus of the railway, San Francisco and Hawaii, and the other steamships of the line making trips between Coatzacoalcas, the Gulf terminus, and New York and Philadelphia. About 9,000 miles will be saved by this arrangement.

Shorter Than Panama Route.
It is expected that the new railway will, in a short time, relieve the Panama road, which, as a matter of fact, is being used to the limit of its capacity in transporting material in connection with the digging of the canal. The projectors of the new railway have made a point of showing that by the new route the distance between New York and certain Pacific ports is, on the average, about 1,900 miles shorter than by the Panama route. When the canal is completed, however, the convenience of the waterway over a line of rail may to some extent offset this present advantage.

At the present time the Tehuantepec railway offers more direct communication between the Pacific and the Gulf than does Panama, and, where the only alternative is a voyage "around the Horn," it is likely to be selected for certain kinds of freight. It has been pointed out that even after the completion of the Panama canal the advantage in time saved will still be with the Tehuantepec.

Advantage Over Canal.
The estimates made for the Panama canal show that it will take nearly a day for a steamship to pass through. As freight can be taken from one steamer, carried across Tehuantepec and loaded upon another vessel in 34 hours, the claim is made, that, owing to the average mileage saved, the Mexican route will show an advantage of nearly four days over Panama in the majority of instances.

HUGE COAL BILL OF RAILROADS.

Locomotives Burn Many Thousands of Tons of Fuel.

The bill for locomotive fuel is the largest item of expense for materials incurred by railroads and it averages about 15 per cent. of the total operating expense. The annual reports of railroads, which are now coming out, give a few figures relating to fuel which help in forming an idea of the enormous consumption of coal by railroads in the year covered, says the Railway Age.

Thus the report of the Rock Island system for the year ended with June, 1906, when it operated 1,257 locomotives, shows that the coal bill was nearly $5,000,000. On the Chicago & Northwestern for the same period, when it operated 1,342 locomotives, the cost for fuel for them was $5,362,000.

The interstate commerce commission statistics for the year 1904 shows that the locomotive fuel bill for all the railroads in the United States amounted to $159,000,000. If we take the average cost of coal at $1.50 per ton, which is probably high for the whole country, this would represent a consumption of 106,000,000 tons of coal. The number of locomotives owned by railroads in the year 1904 was 46,835, and assuming eight per cent. of these to be in the shop under repairs, there remain 37,508 engines in service, and this number, divided into 106,000,000 tons gives 2,826 tons as the average consumption of coal per engine year.

Coming now to something more definite, for a single road, we find from the annual report of the Union Pacific for the year ended with June, 1905, that it paid for its coal $3,394,288, and that the average cost per ton was $1.76, so that the coal consumed by locomotives on that line amounted to 1,928,620 tons. The number of locomotives then owned was 825, from which we deduct eight per cent, leaving 767 in active service; this figure divided into the tons, as given, shows an average consumption per engine year of 2,515 tons.

In the Chicago & Alton annual report for the year ended with June, 1906, we find the coal bill was $754,000, and the average cost per ton was $1.20, which corresponds to a consumption of 628,300 tons. The total engine equipment is 250, less eight per cent, leaves 230 in active service, which divided into the tons shows a consumption of 2,730 tons of coal per engine year. In the Lehigh Valley report for the same year there is a statement showing that the locomotives on that road made an average of 34,921 miles per year, and that the coal consumption per engine mile was 152.4 pounds. The product of these two figures gives 5,231,960 pounds, or 2,666 tons per engine year. This figure lies between those obtained for the Alton and the Union Pacific, and we may infer that the average consumption of coal by locomotives on roads having modern equipment is probably about 2,500 tons per year.

Gasoline Railway Cars.
Gasoline railway cars are now used by the Union Pacific Railway company. The cars are constructed of steel, and have six-cylinder vertical motors, rated at 100 h. p., and started by compressed air. The cars can travel at 40 miles an hour, and can be stopped in less than 40 yards when traveling at full speed.

CHINA'S PRESS AND IDOLS.

People Are Awakening to Folly of Ancient Custom.

"Whilst the Chinese government is trying to coerce the editors and prevent them from interfering with local customs and usages, the native press here in the south is attacking idolatry with sword and spear," writes a Canton correspondent to the North China Daily News of Shanghai. "There was a time when missionaries were blamed for venturing to say anything disrespectful against the idols of China, and when we have heard some of them preach we must say that, in the main they have been very tactful in their dealings with these things. But the Chinese themselves are not in any way sensitive in their handling of the question."

"Idols and the like, incense burning and all its accessories, incantations and all their kindred superstitions are heaped together and, so to speak, set on fire in the presence of the people. The whole system is held up to ridicule and condemned as stupid, expensive and degrading in the extreme. The people are urged to sweep away the whole paraphernalia without keeping any part of it worth a cash."

"Confucian classics are quoted as showing that when Confucius was leading the people into paths of righteousness and happiness, idols had not yet invaded China; foreigners are also held up as worthy of imitation, for they, at least only worship one God. Such attacks on the part of the native press will do much to hasten the disintegration of the superstition of idolatry."

INDORSED GOOD MAN'S PRAYER.

Youth Even Added Strength to the Deacon's Explanation.

Franklin Whitcomb waxed reminiscent the other night, and favored a few cronies assembled in his cozy library with a story or two of his early life in that town where Denman Thompson has made all Whitcombs famous, Swanzey, N. H.

The senior deacon of the little white church in which Mr. Whitcomb first heard a sermon was an ardent advocate of good government and good laws. It was his custom, on the Sunday preceding the opening of the legislature, to pray that affairs might run smoothly in that august assemblage. He would pray something after this fashion:

"Oh, Lord, bless the general court, and grant that the senators and representatives all hang together."

One Sunday, after the deacon had finished this stereotyped sentence, a young man who was kneeling in a nearby pew, and whose name Mr. Whitcomb, for sundry reasons, sees fit not to disclose, exclaimed: "Yes, do, Lord, do!" It is the prayer of all good people.

The deacon was a little nettled, and replied: "Brethren, I fear my meaning and that of the young man do not correspond. I pray that they may all hang together in peace and concord."

"No matter what cord," said the youth whose identity is withheld, "provided it's a strong cord."—Boston Herald.

"Mark Twain" Indignant.

The writer at one time was associated with "Mrs. Partington" (B. P. Shillaber) in editing a church fair paper. Through the solicitation of Mr. Shillaber—who had a wide acquaintance in literary circles—quite a number of articles were contributed by authors of prominence, among whom was "Mark Twain," who sent the following characteristic reply:

"Friend Shillaber—Your pleasant note asking me to furnish you 'half a dozen lines' for the church fair paper you are editing came to hand, and I set about it with friendly alacrity, but when I looked at your note again and saw that it was half a dozen lines you wanted, instead of half a dozen 'lies,' I felt disappointed and outraged. Now, don't come to a journalist any more for a little simple thing like that—poets are the people who write the 'lines.' William G. Shakespeare or some similar artist is the party you want. Your friend, Mark Twain."

Talking From Stratas.

"Seems to me," said the girl, "that we are made up of different stratas, and that we talk sometimes from one strata and sometimes from another. The whole sum of our stratas—what we really are—is rarely ever expressed in speech. People who hear us talk from one of the lower stratas judge us by that. When we are in an elevated mood and talk from a higher strata we are judged by that. No one can judge of us who hasn't heard us talk from all stratas—grave and gay, frivolous and thoughtful. The whole substance of us is not to be revealed in our partial moods and conversations. And, therefore, it is that so many people misjudge us—either under-rate or over-rate us; and the most never understand us at all."

To Encourage Sleep.

Many people suffer constantly from a sense of over-fatigue which entirely prevents sleep at night. A hot bath taken before retiring is a capital antidote in some cases, but in others the bath acts as a stimulant rather than a narcotic, and prevents rather than engenders sleep. One of the best means of obtaining rest is a cup of warm milk to which has been added a pinch of salt and a dash of pepper, while many people ignore the fact that sleeplessness is caused by shut windows and a lack of fresh air.

Good Advice.

Talk as if you were making your will; the fewer words the less litigation.—Balthasar Gracian.

What "Amen" Meant.

A boy asked his sister what "Amen" meant. She replied: "Don't touch it." One day the mother asked the girl what "Amen" meant, and again she answered, "Don't touch it." "Where did you learn that?" "Why, you told me so yourself." "Oh, no," said the mother; "I told you, 'So let it be.'"

Uncanny Charm.

Lady Violet Greville has a story of a woman who had a little Japanese charm given her. Every time she wore it some mischance happened, and she generally fell ill. Her son at last took the jewel to the keeper of the Japanese curiosities in the Paris museum and requested to be informed what the charm represented. "This," said the expert at once, "is the emblem of sickness. The woman never wore it again."

EVOLUTION AND EXPANSION BY MEANS OF ADVERTISING

Every enterprise—especially every store—is advertised occasionally in an ADEQUATE WAY. The aggressive advertiser should aim always to make last month's BEST advertising this month's AVERAGE advertising; and this month's BEST advertising next month's average. THIS WILL MEAN NATURAL AND POSSIBLE EVOLUTION AND EXPANSION.

As "it is possible to sprout an acorn in a green-house, but impossible to grow an oak there," so it is possible to advertise a store in a small space—BUT IMPOSSIBLE TO GROW A "BIG STORE" IN LESS THAN BIG ADVERTISING SPACE.
